YOUNG JOHN ROBERT POWERS MODELING SCHOOL STUDENT CONSISTENTLY WORKS IN NEW YORK CITY

Ford Models

(Los Angeles, September 19, 2008) – President of John Robert Powers, Ron Patterson, is excited to discuss the success of a young girl by the name of Victoria Tu from John Robert Powers Long Island who at the age of eight is currently one of the top earners for the children’s division for the prestigious Ford Modeling Agency in New York City. “I can’t seem to flip through any magazine these days without seeing our John Robert Powers success story Victoria Tu,” said Ron Patterson. “John Robert Powers Long Island must be doing something right; Victoria is only eight years old and she has already made a huge modeling career for herself.”

Victoria Tu had been taking modeling classes with John Robert Powers for a year or so when she got her big break. John Robert Powers Long Island introduced Victoria to a modeling scout from Lucky Magazine during a modeling casting call at the Long Island school. The representative from Lucky Magazine immediately called contacts at Ford Modeling Agency and Victoria was signed. Since then she has appeared in national campaigns for The Gap, DKNY, Baby Phat and the immensely popular American Girl franchise.

Victoria Tu is just like every other eight year old busy with school and fighting over chocolate chip cookies with her older sister but besides doing her homework and after school activities, Victoria can often be found under the hot lights in downtown New York City filming a commercial or shooting a photo campaign for Nordstrom’s, Macys, Target or Bloomingdales.

“I love modeling,” says Victoria Tu. “It’s a lot of hard work but it’s really fun to be around other kids and to get to wear so many great clothes. I’m very lucky and will always be very grateful to John Robert Powers.”
